How training solution providers are using new technologies to create a competitive advantage

Businesses are turning to training solution providers and RTOs to design and implement skills development programs that help fill critical skills gaps by upskilling and cross-skilling existing staff. This creates a huge opportunity for training companies – if they can deliver competency-based training offerings that meet expectations quickly.

What can trainers do with a modern learning platform?

Personalize training to the individual learner, but at scale. Trainers need a way to factor individuality into their programs – they need to build the right content and then tailor delivery to how, when and where individuals want to receive it.

Deliver fun, engaging courses that ensure comprehension and mastery. Training providers can put their creativity to work via a modern learning platform with capabilities and innovations like AI, social learning, virtual reality, and more.

Provide mentoring capabilities and community engagement. Most learners perform best with the help and guidance of experts and peers. The CYPHER platform lets trainers generate detailed Q&As, quizzes and timed assessments to monitor progress.

Gain complete visibility across clients, courses and learners with a click. Robust, customizable reporting is a must for giving trainers a real-time, on-demand view into course completion and performance at the learner, organization and content levels.

Simplify administration and communication with automation. Modern learning platforms like CYPHER automate and personalize client and learner interactions, so trainers can focus their time and attention on creating the best content for their clients.

Modern learning platforms like CYPHER Learning and its AI-powered CYPHER Copilot tool are designed to empower training providers to deliver effective competency-based programs with speed and ease, while building their reputation – and their business – as a true training innovator.
